1. In August 1950 the Chinese Communist 42 Army, under the Political Department of the Northeast Military District, began training 28,000 Korean troops at Yonchi (129-31, 42-55), T'unghua (125-57, 41-43), Mutanchiang (129-37, 44-35), and Hishan (132-06, 45-35). These troops were mostly from North Korea, but 20 percent of them were Koreans of Chinese nationality who had been recruited locally in Manchuria; they were partially officered by Koreans who had served in the Chinese Communist Army. These troops have now been rearmed and sent to North Korea. North Korea furnished 60 percent of their equipment and the Chinese Communists contributed 40 percent, but a quantity of heavy armament promised them by the Soviets had not been delivered prior to their return to North Korea.
 2. An additional 60,000 North Korean troops are being reorganized and trained in Manchuria.

1. On 16 December 60,000 Chinese Communist troops, fully equipped, were concentrated in the Kyomipo (125-37, 38-45) area. These troops were scheduled to arrive at the front lines by 29 December. Chinese Communist forces concentrated in other areas were ordered to be in position at the front line in battle readiness by 30 December.
2. On 18 December approximately one division of Chinese Communist troops were concentrated in Muna-ri (sic) (possibly Mulgae-ri, 126-19, 38-22), north of Namchonjom, billeted in village houses. An additional (undetermined) number of Chinese Communists arrived in the village on 18 December, and both groups departed on the morning of 19 December in the direction of Namchonjom. These troops were equipped with 11 anti-tank guns, 4 field guns of undetermined calibre, and 2 long-range guns of large (undetermined) calibre, all of which were supplied within the previous 3 days.
3. An undetermined number of Chinese Communist troops began concentrating in an orchard 2 kilometers south of Namchonjom on 12 December. They were equipped with six tanks and four armored cars. By 19 December one North Korean engineering battalion had joined these forces.
4. The North Korean government as of 19 December was compulsorily mobilizing all citizens 15-55 years old in the Sariwon, Sinnak, and Kumchom (126-29, 38-09) areas. Those physically fit were taken to Manchuria for training; the remainder were used to transport supplies for the North Koreans and Chinese at the rate of 3 mal per person. They move only on dark nights and travel 4 kilometers a night. Prisoners of war are also used to transport ammunition and food.

1. A strict control is kept on all movements of persons in the area near the Rumanian-Yugoslav and Rumanian-Bulgarian frontiers. The 200-kilometer section between Filiasi and Caransebes on the Bucharest-Timisoara railroad line is under very heavy surveillance. Special Militia squads continually circulate through the trains on this section of the line. Examination of passenger's documents takes place four or five times within this 200-kilometer zone.

1. The Tiskanina Textile Factory in Kranj, formerly the Jugobruna textile factory, was the property of a company of shareholders who were mainly Czech. After the factory was nationalized, few of the old co-owners and directors remained other than several Czech specialists and German engineers.
2. The factory is bordered to the northeast by the Sava River, to the south by the industrial railroad to Ljubljana, and to the southwest by the Jesenice-Traic railroad.
3. The factory has a weaving mill with stamping machine, mechanical workshop, bleaching section, and a dyeing section. The factory is equipped with machinery which was imported from Czechoslovakia. The dyeing machinery was imported from Germany. The machinery is driven electrically, and the electricity is supplied by the Majdic hydro-electric plant on the Sava River, the Pollak and Majer hydro-electric plants on the Kokra River, the Zirovnica plant, and the government overhead system which conducts electricity from the Fala hydro-electric plant on the Drava River. The daily output of the factory amounts to an average of four carloads of all types of fabrics.
4. The factory employs 2,000 workmen. Raw materials, particularly Russian yarn which is very popular in this factory, are obtained from the Soviet Union. Cotton is obtained from Turkey in exchange for wood, while raw materials for the production of imitation silk are obtained from Belgium in exchange for wood.
5. Plain fabrics and prints for women's dresses are exported to Italy. Pocket handkerchiefs, material for men's shirts, material for towels, and damask and imitation silk are used on the domestic market.
